CCI edges lower amid the trend of deflation

Thai consumer confidence fell to 63 in March 2024 from 63.8 in the previous month. It was the first decline in consumer morale after improving for seven consecutive times, due to slow economic recovery and elevated living costs. According to an official survey, consumers were starting to express concerns about the economy's performance and escalating energy costs. However, confidence may rebound in the future as government spending accelerates after a delayed budget was passed. Thailand's GDP shrank 0.6% quarter-on-quarter in the Q1 of 2024. In February, the Bank of Thailand lowered its 2024 growth outlook between 2.5% and 3.0% from 3.2%.
